Tired of the big guys getting all the loot? Now there's a game anyone can win.

From our Oregon Lottery.

Even better, there are two games.

Oregon's lotto, Megabucks, the weekly drawing that guarantees you a jackpot of at least a million dollars. Though chances are it'll grow a lot higher. And the instant, scratch games, with lots of low and medium prizes and a weekly jackpot wheel that gives you yet another chance to win a bundle.

So go ahead. Take a shot at playing. It won't make you a member of the team. Though if you win, you could buy the team.

HARRY GLICKMAN

The Portland Trail Blazers, one of the most successful franchises in all of sports and a model for other organizations in professional basketball, point to the accomplishments of one man as the foundation for their rise to the top.

The man is Harry Glickman.

It was more than just a fitting tribute to the highly successful Blazer executive vice-president when he was enshrined in the Oregon Sports Hall of Fame in August. It was recognition for the man who has been the compelling force in introducing and maintaining professional sports in the Pacific Northwest.

The success of the Trail Blazers has been unequalled since Glickman first began wooing a franchise to Portland as early as the mid-1960's.

In January of 1970, Glickman went to the league meetings of the NBA in Philadelphia with the backing for a franchise. Expansion into San Diego, Phoenix and Seattle, coupled with the transplanting of the Minneapolis Lakers to Los Angeles and the Philadelphia Warriors to San Francisco, opened up the West Coast to the predominately eastern league and enhanced Portland's bid for a team.

At the Philadelphia meetings, Glickman found the ground rules had changed and the ante had been increased for an expansion team. He returned home empty-handed but that initial setback was shortlived. A month later, with new financial backing, the Portland Trail Blazers were born at a meeting in Los Angeles.

Just seven seasons into existence, the Blazers brought a world championship to the city of Portland. Glickman's initial commitment to putting Portland at the forefront of the NBA has never wavered, avoiding the complacency that sometimes accompanies success.

Entering the 1986-87 season, the Blazers have sold out an astounding 400 consecutive homes games at Memorial Coliseum. That's easily the longest string by any team in any sport.

Glickman was born in Portland and graduated from the University of Oregon School of Journalism in 1948 following a stint in Germany during World War II. He served as director of the university's athletic news bureau as a sophomore during the Ducks' Cotton Bowl era of the late Norm Van Brocklin, one of Glickman's close friends.

Plans to become a sports writer were tabled as Glickman began to open doors for himself in the area of promotions and publicity. After founding Oregon Sports Attractions in 1952, he devoted his efforts to promoting boxing, professional football and the Harlem Globetrotters, as well as non-sports related activities such as the Northwest tours of Judy Garland and Liberace.

A pre-season football game between the Los Angeles Rams and the Chicago Cardinals in 1952 was staged by Glickman at Multnomah Civic Stadium. With more than 29,100 fans in attendance, it was his first sellout. He continued to bring the NFL to Portland until 1969.

Glickman served as manager of Multnomah Civic Stadium in 1958 and 1959.

In the fall of 1960, Glickman brought professional hockey back to Portland after a 10-year absence, organizing the Portland Buckaroos of the old Western Hockey League. During the '60s, the Buckaroos finished first seven times and second twice in one nine-year stretch. They smashed every attendance record in professional hockey outside the then tightly-knit six-team National Hockey League.

Glickman's commitment to improving the quality of life for the people of Oregon has not been limited just to providing the benefits derived from the realm of sports. He is active in a wide variety of civic affairs.

He is a member of the board of directors of Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Oregon, the U.S. Committee Sports for Israel and the Sixth-Man Foundation. He's on the board of trustees of Congregation Beth Israel, and a member of the advancement council of the School of Journalism at the University of Oregon.

Glickman and his wife, Joanne, have two daughters, Lynn and Jennifer, and a son, Marshall. Jennifer is a publicity assistant with the Trail Blazers, and Marshall is broadcast coordinator for the NBA office in New York.

Glickman's hobbies include golf, tennis and fishing. He authored the popular book, 'Promoter Ain't a Dirty Word,' an account of his life in sports management.

JON SPOELSTRA

As professional sports continue to change with the times, operation costs esculate and the need for new ideas to offset those costs must be developed and implemented.

In Portland, that difficult task falls to Jon Spoelstra, the Trail Blazers' senior vice-president and general manager.

In his eighth year with the Blazers, Spoelstra oversees the organization's efforts in the areas of marketing, radio, television, cable, tickets and in developing community service projects.

The accomplishments of Portland's marketing department are widely noted in the world of professional sports. The Oregonian newspaper most accurately depicted the club's secret to success.

"The Portland marketing department serves as a model for the entire National Basketball Association," the paper reported in November of 1985, "and the main reason is Spoelstra."

A graduate of Notre Dame, where he earned a degree in communications, Spoelstra worked for the NBA's Buffalo franchise prior to coming to Portland in 1979. He has been the underlying force behind the Blazers' reputation for innovation, and his expertise has been sought by a number of other sports organizations.

In fact, it was that expertise that took Spoelstra into the center of one of the strangest trades in NBA history. When an injury to guard Darnell Valentine sent Portland searching for a replacement, Indiana veteran Don Buse was obtained by the club. The compensation to the Pacers was a man who had yet to see a minute of playing time in the NBA but who had earned an all-star reputation among the league's front office personnel—Jon Spoelstra. The Blazer marketing expert served as a consultant to the Pacers for a short time during the restructuring of that team's front office. It was a classic example of a transaction where both clubs benefitted.

"Jon is a brilliant and effective marketing executive," said David Stern, commissioner of the National Basketball Association. "The NBA is very fortunate that he decided to devote his talents and energies to our sport."

The prevailing attitude that fuels Spoelstra's efforts is one of service.

"We have in our conference room a sign that reads 'service is everything'," Spoelstra pointed out. "We are constantly asking ourselves how we can better serve the people who are involved with the Trail Blazers, either as sponsors or fans. We're always looking to better the experience of being part of the Blazer family. This is what I call marketing."

A walk-on to the freshman basketball team at Notre Dame, Spoelstra originally planned to pursue a career as a sportswriter. His father, Watson Spoelstra, was on the staff of the Detroit News for 40 years and was a reporter for The Sporting News.

As often befalls a man of determination, other doors opened for Spoelstra, and he found his way to Portland. The Trail Blazers, as well as the entire league, have been reaping the benefits ever since.

Jon and his wife, Lisa, have two children. Monica is a junior at the University of Notre Dame and Erik is a junior at Jesuit High.

GEORGE RICKLES

You might say that George Rickles has worked with a lot of people over the years. Several million to be a bit more exact.

Rickles has been with the Trail Blazers since the team opened for business 17 years ago and now serves as Vice President of Administration. His primary responsibility has involved directing the club's ticket sales, and now its customer service center.

That's been no small task. In their first 16 years, the Blazers set attendance records that may seem nearly impossible for any organization in any sport to every match.

No NBA franchise in history has drawn so many fans in such a short time as Portland has. During the team's brief lifetime, Rickles has sold seats to 7.6 million Blazer backers at Memorial Coliseum. The string of 400 consecutive sellouts entering the 1986-87 season is the longest of any organization in sports, and the end doesn't appear to be on the horizon with season tickets as much in demand as ever.

Prior to his Blazer career, Rickles directed the ticket operations for the Portland Buckaroos professional hockey team for 13 years. He helped set the attendance records for the Western Hockey League club.

An accomplished gourmet, Rickles has three sons, Norman and Steve, both Portland attorneys, and Jerry, operator of a local record store. His wife, Sharla, is a registered nurse.

KEN BARTELL

Ken Bartell is in his third year as Portland's Vice President of Finance, supervising all of the club's financial business.

He brought with him to the Trail Blazers a strong background in the business world. Bartell's business background began with Sheraton Hotels, where he served as controller. With Sheraton, he traveled worldwide, spending extended periods in various cities in the United States and Puerto Rico.

A native of Niagra Falls, Bartell served as general manager of Portland radio stations KEX and KQFM prior to joining the Blazer staff. He had been the station's business manager for five years.

Bartell is in charge of guiding the Portland front office into the computer age. He was the key person in installing the most sophisticated computer operations in the NBA and is constantly refining and updating the extensive system. The computer applications range from accounting to tickets to marketing and even scouting.

His wife, Kathleen, was formerly Media Manager of the Trail Blazers.

MORRIS (BUCKY) BUCKWALTER

It's a long road from the Grande Ronde Valley of rural eastern Oregon to the glamorous metropolitan centers of the NBA.

But that didn't deter Bucky Buckwalter in his ascension to the position of Vice-President—Basketball Operations with the Portland Trail Blazers. It only helped provide a lifetime of colorful material for one of the game's great personalities, and a wealth of experience for one of the game's best talent assessors.

Buckwalter begins his first full season in charge of Portland's player personnel, a position he assumed last January after serving as an assistant coach and chief scout for the club since 1979.

For those not familiar with Buckwalter's knack for discerning and claiming outstanding talent from unexpected sources, they need not look any further than the 1986 NBA Draft. It was vintage Buckwalter.

When the names of Arvidas Sabonis, Panagiotis Fasoulas and Drazen Petrovic was affixed to the Blazer draft board fans and media alike scrambled to find the book on the new additions. Before the day was done, it became clear that Portland had stolen the show from the rest of the league on this draft day. The Blazers had staked claim to America's top collegiate player, Walter Berry, and the best talent available across the ocean.

It was Buckwalter's expertise that fostered Portland's bold move to act globally. He has spent considerable time analyzing the foreign leagues, and, in fact, served as head coach of the Brazilian national team when it upset the Russian team in Moscow during 1975. He'd even studied international law at the American Institute for Foreign Trade before devoting all his energy toward basketball.

Closer to home, Buckwalter has plucked several plums that have become valuable contributors to the success of the Trail Blazers. Foremost has been Terry Porter, the team's first round draft pick a year ago out of Wisconsin-Stevens Point; Jerome Kersey of Longwood College in Virginia and Steve Colter from New Mexico State, both second-round selections in 1984; Johnny Davis, a second round pick from Dayton in 1976; and Billy Ray Bates, a charismatic guard imported from the CBA during the 1979-80 season.

Buckwalter was introduced to professional basketball in the summer of 1972 when he joined the Seattle SuperSonics as an assistant coach. When Tom Nissalke was fired in January of 1973, Buckwalter took over as head coach for the remainder of the campaign. The following season, he was an assistant general manager to Bill Russell with the Sonics.

The 1974-75 season saw Buckwalter at the helm of the Utah Stars in the American Basketball Association. Perhaps his most notable accomplishment that year was to lure a youngster named Moses Malone from Petersburg, Virginia to forego a collegiate career in favor of a professional contract.

Buckwalter also coached the Fresno Stars of the Western Basketball Association for a year before joining the Trail Blazer staff.

His roots are deeply planted in the Oregon soil. A 1952 graduate of LaGrande High School, Buckwalter led his Blue Mountain Conference team to the state tournament as a 6-2 senior forward with a reputation for being a furious competitor. LaGrande finished fourth in the tournament, and Buckwalter, who was also senior class president, was selected as an all-state forward.

Buckwalter played collegiate basketball at Utah, where he led the team in scoring as a sophomore and was all-conference his last two seasons. Those two final years saw Utah reach the NCAA tournament only to lose to eventual champion San Francisco, which featured Bill Russell.

After serving as an assistant coach for eight seasons at Utah, Buckwalter took over as head coach at Seattle University in 1967-68 and in five seasons posted a sparkling 79-49 record, a .617 winning percentage.

Buckwalter's journeys have provided enough stories to fill a library with volumes of interesting anecdotes. When he wasn't taming the wild world of basketball, he could even have been found riding the range of the wild, wild west on the silver screen in "Pillars in the Sky" with Jeff Chandler and Dorothy Malone or playing opposite the legendary John Wayne in the film "McQ". And there's every indication that the next sequel will always be in the works.

Buckwalter and his wife, Paula, live in east Multnomah County. Their son, Bryan, played basketball last season at Chemeketa Community College.

Why is this plane smiling?

It's smiling because PSA flies from Portland to 17 cities throughout the west including Los Cabos Mexico.

But that's not the only reason it's smiling. From Portland PSA is the only airline that offers comfortable 3 + 2 seating on everyone of our flights, giving 80% of our passengers window or aisle seats on one of the newest jet fleets of any major airline in the world. Plus, no other airline offers frequent flyers free trips for less mileage than PSA.

For reservations, call your professional travel agent or PSA at (503) 284-5193. Outside the Portland area call 1-800-I-FLY-PSA and find out for yourself that our smiles are on the inside of our planes too.

PSA. Catch Our Smile.

A few words about pride.

To a world striving to communicate, we provide quality communications products and services. In an era of technological advances, we are a leader in innovation. Yet our pride is being part of the communities we serve—the cities and towns which look to GTE for answers to communications needs. We're proud of those communities and we're proud to contribute to the local arts.

GTE

The front-runner in communications.
And proud of it.

MIKE SCHULER

Like the pioneers who settled the state of Oregon a century ago, Mike Schuler has journeyed west with the vision and aspiration to forge a future that he had only dreamed about for a long, long time.

When Schuler was named head coach of the Portland Trail Blazers on May 28, 1986, it fulfilled a dream that he had strived for most of his professional life, to lead a team into battle in the National Basketball Association. It was obvious from that day that he'd been preparing for this opportunity for a long time and had a mental blueprint of what a Schuler-coached team would look like.

The operative word in that Blazer blueprint is defense, with multiple halfcourt and fullcourt defensive sets similar to the style that Schuler helped construct as an assistant coach the past three seasons with the Milwaukee Bucks.

"Portland can be a good defensive team," Schuler said his first day on the job. "They have more quickness here than we did in Milwaukee. I think the players will improve their defense when they realize this is a top priority. No one in the league will be better prepared or will play harder than we will."

Schuler learned his craft as an understudy to some of the best minds in basketball and served as a head coach in the college ranks for seven years. Prior to joining Don Nelson's staff at Milwaukee, he was initiated into the NBA as an assistant to Larry Brown with the New Jersey Nets.

"You've got an excellent guy," Nelson said of his former aide. "He's an outstanding coach. He's the best assistant I've ever had."

A graduate of Ohio University, Schuler spent three years in high school coaching followed by a year with Bobby Knight's NIT-bound Army team in 1965. In 1966, he returned to his alma mater as assistant coach and helped direct the team to two Mid-American Conference titles and a trip to the National Invitation Tournament in three seasons.

From 1969 to 1972, Schuler was head coach at Virginia Military Institute, a job he shouldered at just 29 years of age. He left the school for a five-year stint as an assistant to Bill Gibson and then Terry Holland at Virginia from 1972 to 1977.

The head coaching position at Rice opened up in 1977 and Schuler answered the call to attempt to turn around a program that had never threatened to ascend to the top of the Southwest Conference. In four years at the Houston school, Schuler's Owls made steady progress. The 1980-81 team finished with a 12-15 mark and made tremendous strides toward respectibility when it became the first Rice team ever to beat cross-town rival Houston and the first to defeat Texas at Austin. He was named Southwest Conference Co-Coach of the Year when Rice had its winningest season in a decade.

In 1981, Brown tapped Schuler to be his assistant at New Jersey. Schuler coached the Nets' Summer League team and compiled a 25-5 record. The team won the league title in 1981 and went to the semifinals in 1982.

All of these influences will be called upon as Schuler begins to chart a new course for the Trail Blazers. Still, he's his own man.

"I'm not Bobby Knight, and I'm not Don Nelson," Schuler said. "I have to coach the way I feel most comfortable.

"I will be fair with our players, and I will be demanding with them. A strength of mine would be as a communicator. My players will have some feedback into our program.

"I don't think anybody can put as much pressure on me as I put on myself," he added. "I think our talent is almost as good as anybody's in the NBA. I do not plan not to succeed. This is one of the top franchises in the NBA."

Schuler earned his bachelor's degree in education at Ohio University. He has been known as a teacher and educator of the game, as is evident through his popularity at basketball clinics and camps. Mike and his wife, Gloria, have two daughters, Kimberly and Kristin. He was born September 22, 1940 in Portsmouth, Ohio.

"I don't care how many years go by. It still makes my breath stop, every time I remember."

"My little girl was about the same age my granddaughter is now.

"I'd had some cleaning fluids under the sink and Sally must have gotten into them while I was upstairs.

"When I found her, she was sitting on the kitchen floor, holding one of those bottles. And acting mighty sick. I called the doctor over in Corvallis, but just kept on getting a busy signal.

"So I did the only thing I could think of. I called the operator. She just took over and cut in on the line and asked if the doctor was in, and he was. She put him on. And just that quick he told me what to do.

"These days, of course, the doctors all have something called 'Call Waiting,' so they know if you're trying to get through. Why they can even check your vital signs, right over the phone.

"But whatever miracles the phone company comes up with next, I'll always be grateful for that operator."

At Pacific Northwest Bell we've always been more than operators or data transmission, or even Call Waiting. At PNB,

We've always been the future.℠

RICK ADELMAN

Rick Adelman, an original Trail Blazer and the club's first team captain, is in his fourth season as a Portland assistant coach.

Adelman joined Jack Ramsay's coaching staff in the fall of 1983 after a 10-year hiatus from Portland. In just three seasons he became one of the most respected young assistants in the NBA, easing new head coach Mike Schuler's task of selecting assistants for his first season.

"I am delighted to be able to retain Rick Adelman," Schuler said in announcing his staff. "His background as a former player and his years as a coach combine to make him a great asset for Portland. Additionally, he has developed a valuable rapport with our players. We're happy to have him remaining with the Blazers."

A 6-1 guard in his playing days, Adelman was selected by Portland from San Diego in the expansion draft of 1970 and was the cover subject of Portland's first media guide. He was the team captain during the 1971-72 season, the first Blazer player given that responsibility (there was no captain in the initial season of 1970-71).

Adelman played three seasons with the Trail Blazers (1970-71 through 1972-73), averaging 9.8 points and 4.6 assists in 237 games. He set what then was a Portland record for assists in leading the club with 413 and a 5.2 average in 1971-72. His 17 assists against Cleveland on Nov. 19, 1971 remains Portland's all-time record for assists in a single game.

Overall, Adelman played in 462 regular-season games during a seven-year stint in the NBA that included stops in San Diego, Portland, Chicago, New Orleans and Kansas City. He recorded 3,579 points (for a 7.7 average), earned 1,606 assists (for a 3.5 average) and shot .415 from the field and .713 from the foul line.

A graduate of St. Pius X High School in Downey, Calif., Adelman scored a school-record 1,415 points (an 18.6 average) in four collegiate seasons at Loyola. He earned his master's degree in history at the institution following his retirement from the NBA.

One year of work with Converse preceded Adelman's move to Salem, Ore., where he served as head coach at Chemeketa Community College for six seasons. His teams posted a 141-39 record, winning outright or sharing three Oregon community college championships and one Region 18 title.

Adelman and his wife, Mary Kay, have two daughters, Kathryn Mary, 15, and Laura, 10, and they have two sons, R.J., 13, and David, 5. Adelman was born June 16, 1946.

JACK SCHALOW

Jack Schalow is in his first season as assistant coach and chief scout for the Portland Trail Blazers.

A veteran of the collegiate coaching ranks and the Continental Basketball Association, Schalow will tap his vast experience to serve the Blazers on the bench as well as on the road. He'll assist Coach Mike Schuler on the Portland bench until the college basketball season begins. Then, he'll scour campuses across the country in search of the best young talent that will maintain the Trail Blazers' position as one of the NBA's best teams for years to come.

"Jack is a great addition to our coaching staff," Schuler said in naming his assistant. "I've known him for a long time, and he is an outstanding teacher with first rate college and professional coaching experience. He will become a big factor in the Trail Blazers' future."

Schalow has been a Blazer scout since last December. Prior to undertaking those duties, he was head coach of the Wyoming Wildcatters in the CBA. In the 1982-83 season, his first with the Wildcatters, Schalow guided the team to a runner-up finish in the league's Western Division in just the organization's first year of operation. Wyoming won the Western Division and went the distance in the CBA championship series before falling to the Albany Patroons in the final game. The 1984-85 season saw the Wildcatters win the Western Division regular season race but finished third in the division playoffs. In his three seasons at Wyoming, Schalow fashioned a 69-67 record and was runner-up for the CBA Coach-of-the-Year Award following the 1983-84 campaign.

The 47-year-old Schalow is widely noted at the collegiate level. A graduate of University of the Pacific, Schalow served as freshman coach at his alma mater in Stockton, Calif. His other head coaching assignment came at Morehead State in Kentucky. Schalow also served as assistant coach at Duke (with Hubie Brown), Louisiana State and Seattle University. Two of his five seasons at Seattle were as an assistant under Bucky Buckwalter, current Vice President of Basketball Operations with the Blazers.

RON CULP

Ron Culp returns for his 13th season as the Blazers' trainer and his 17th tour of duty in the National Basketball Association.

When major league basketball was born in Portland on Nov. 16, 1970, Culp was on hand for the christening, not, ironically, as a member of the Trail Blazers but as the trainer of the visiting Cleveland Cavaliers. It wasn't until 1974 that the Ohio native came to Portland to join the staff under new head coach Lenny Wilkins.

Culp is now one of the veterans of his job in the NBA. Only four other trainers have been in the league since the fall of 1970 when Culp joined the Cavaliers. Joe O'Toole is still with Atlanta, Dick D'Olivia with Golden State, Al Domenico with Philadelphia and Joe Proski with Phoenix.

Longevity is just one way to measure a career in professional basketball. The distinguished recognition that Culp has earned is another outstanding feature of his record. He is clairman-elect of the National Basketball Trainers Association. And he is a member of the American College of Sports Medicine, the National Athletic Trainer Assoc. and the Oregon Athletic Trainers Assoc.

Culp is a 1969 graduate of Bowling Green State University in Ohio. He earned a master's degree at the same school, and has done graduate work in physical therapy at Case Western Reserve University.

Before joining the Cavaliers, Culp was head trainer at Baldwin-Wallace College in Ohio. And while in Cleveland, he was also trainer for the Cleveland Nets of World Team Tennis.

In the off-season in Portland, Culp was trainer for four and one-half seasons for the Portland Timbers of the North American Soccer League. Culp currently sits on the board of directors for the Easter Seals Society and Beaverton Youth Services.

In addition to overseeing all aspects of the players' conditioning, Culp handles almost every detail of the Trail Blazers' road trips. He arranges transportation and lodging and is the team's trouble-shooter who keeps things running smoothly in spite of changing schedules and lost luggage.

Culp's wife, Marilyn, works for the district attorney's office in Portland, and the couple has a daughter, Amanda. Culp was born May 2, 1946.

HENRY WEINHARD

Henry Weinhard
Brewmaster, No. 1, 5'10", 171 lbs.
Born: 1830, Wurtemburg, Germany
High School: Wurtemburg Area
College: Brewers apprentice

At the age of 22, and after years of apprenticeship, a talented Henry Weinhard decided he was ready for the major leagues. Upon surveying his options, Henry determined the best opportunity for a rookie such as him was in America.

In 1852 he came to the United States and immediately found a berth with the brewers in Cincinati, Ohio. He spent four years with this team polishing his skills.

As a free agent, he was intrigued by reports concerning bright openings on the Pacific coast. So early in 1856 he made the long voyage, via the isthmus, to the far west and hooked up with a Vancouver, Washington organization where he plied his trade for six months.

He then felt the time was right to make his move, so, in 1856, he established his own brewery near Fort Vancouver. It wasn't long before soldiers, loggers and trappers of the area became very big Henry Weinhard fans.

In 1860 he moved his operations to its present location on Burnside in Portland. From then on, Henry chalked up an enviable record of victories. He kept acquiring more equipment and adding more facilities to constantly increase his output while stubbornly maintaining the high level of excellence he had become known for. Everywhere along the coast Weinhard's beer was recognized as unsurpassed by any other native product.

Henry's experience and foresight prompted him to locate in Portland because he realized this area would eventually become the primary source of premium brewing ingredients in the United States. Time has proven him right.

Rare, two-row malting barley, for example, is grown in very few areas of the country, but Oregon's Klamath Basin is the most prominent. And the unique Cascade hops — which Henry recognized as being equal if not superior to the exalted Hallertau hop of Bavaria are raised here in Oregon.

Today, two labels continue in the proud, teutonic tradition set forth by Henry Weinhard 124 years ago. The perennial hometown favorite, Blitz-Weinhard, and the handmade, ultra-premium that is his namesake, Henry Weinhard's Private Reserve.

Trailblazer fans can expect a lot of good things from both of them this season. Again.

PORTLAND YEARLY ATTENDANCE

For the tenth straight season, the Portland Trail Blazers were sold out in 1985-86 for all 43 home games, 41 during the regular campaign and two in the playoffs.

This stretched Portland's record for consecutive sellouts for regular-season and playoff action to 400.

It's an all-time National Basketball Association record.

A sellout in Portland is 12,666, which includes a limit of 300 reserved standing room tickets.

The last time the Blazers failed to sell out was on April 5, 1977, when a crowd of 12,359 turned out for a game with Detroit.

In Portland's first 16 NBA seasons, the Blazers have drawn 7,214,418 fans for 654 regular season games. That's an average of 11,031 a contest.

For 683 regular-season and playoff games, the Blazers have drawn 7,583,573 fans for an average of 11,103 a contest.

In 41 regular-season road games in 1985-86, Portland played before 445,427 fans — an average of 10,864 a contest.

For the entire regular season, home and road, attendance was 964,733 for Portland games, an average of 11,765 a contest.

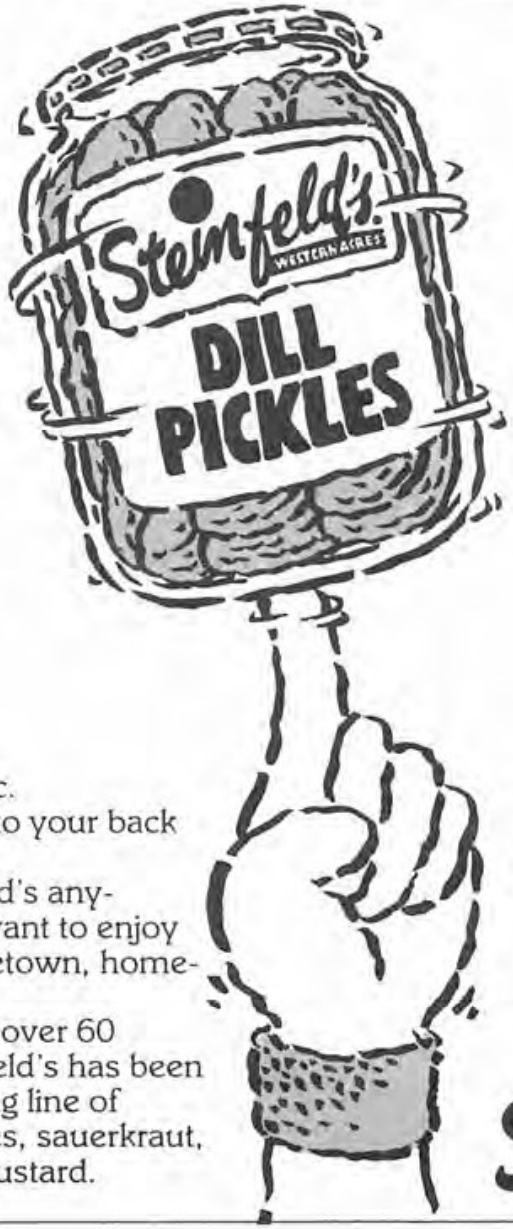
TAKE STEINFELD'S TO COURT.



Or to a picnic.
Or even out to your back yard.
Take Steinfeld's anywhere you want to enjoy a great hometown, homegrown taste.
Because, for over 60 years, Steinfeld's has been making a long line of quality pickles, sauerkraut, relish and mustard.

All with the taste, zest, and crunch that brings the fans to their feet.
And has made Steinfeld's the winning team.
But you be the judge.

BLAZERS vs. ATLANTA — Game-by-Game 1985-86

HAWKS 109, BLAZERS 98, December 4, 1985, At Atlanta

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
18-25	25-25	19-31	36-28	98-109	4,113

Atlanta converted 11 of 21 field goal attempts (.524) while Portland was just 6 of 23 (.261) in the opening quarter as the Hawks built an early 23-13 lead. . . Portland, playing without the services of Kiki Vandeweghe who was sidelined with a turned ankle, was hurt by 12 third-quarter turnovers. . . Atlanta built its largest lead of 24, 100-76, with 6:34 left in the game. . . Steve Colter's 14 fourth-quarter points fueled the Blazers' offensive attack as they blistered the net with a .708 shooting percentage (17-24) in the final frame. . . Dominique Wilkins paced Atlanta's scoring with 31 points, while Colter led Portland with 20.

HAWKS 110, BLAZERS 101, February 16, 1986, At Portland

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
28-25	17-25	18-27	38-33	101-110	12,666

Cliff Levingston scored 25 points and Kevin Willis added 21 to lead Atlanta. . . Down 80-63 with 11:27 remaining, the Blazers staged a furious comeback to pull within six, 99-93, with 2:45 left. . . The Hawks converted all seven of their free throw attempts down the stretch to seal the victory. . . Portland was paced by Vandeweghe's 21 points. . . Atlanta, missing Dominique Wilkins and Antoine Carr because of injury, shot .568 (42-74) from the floor. . . It was the sixth straight setback for Portland.

BLAZERS vs. BOSTON—Game-by-Game 1985-86

BLAZERS 121, CELTICS 103, December 6, 1985, At Boston

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
34-29	22-23	29-25	36-26	121-103	14,890

Boston enjoyed a 40-1 record at Boston Garden during the 1985-86 season but the "1" the Celtics didn't enjoy was the night the Trail Blazers made their annual visit. . . The night belonged to Jerome Kersey who came off the bench to score 22 points in 22 minutes (on 11 of 15 shooting) and handcuff Larry Bird, who was just 9 of 26 from the field. . . Portland, playing without injured Kiki Vandeweghe, was 17-28 (.607) from the floor in the opening period and led despite not going to the foul line, where Boston hit 9 of 12. . . Portland built its lead to 68-58 midway through the third quarter before Bird converted a three-point play with 2:56 on the clock to put the Celtics in front, 75-84. . . Kersey scored eight points in the final 2:25 to give the Blazers an 85-77 edge with the fourth quarter remaining. . . The onslaught continued with Sam Bowie slamming three dunks and Kersey adding eight points early in the final period. . . Portland's largest lead was 23, 119-96, with 1:37 left. . . The Blazers boasted balanced scoring from Kersey (22), Steve Colter (22), Clyde Drexler (19), Bowie (18) and Jim Paxson (16).

CELTICS 120, BLAZERS 119 (OT), February 14, 1986, At Portland

1	2	3	4	(OT)	Final	Att.
25-28	30-27	26-32	28-22	(10-11)	119-120	12,666

Larry Bird (47), Dennis Johnson (29) and Robert Parish (20) accounted for 96 of Boston's 120 points as the Celtics claimed an overtime victory. . . Bird recorded a triple-double with his 47 points, 14 rebounds and 11 assists. . . Kiki Vandeweghe led Portland with 38 points, 15 in the first quarter. . . Boston shot a sizzling .714 (15-21) in the third quarter and took an 87-81 lead into the final period. . . The margin stretched to eight before a Steve Colter lay-in tied the score at 103 with 2:26 remaining. . . Bird brought the Celtics even at 109 and Portland was unable to score at the buzzer, sending the game into overtime. . . The lead changed hands six times in the extra session but a Bird jumper with four seconds left settled the issue in the Celtics' favor. . . The contest was tied on 20 occasions. . . Boston, playing without Kevin McHale, shot .581 (54-93) from the field on the night.

SIXERS 121, BLAZERS 119 (OT), January 1, 1986, At Portland (Game 36, 20-16)

1	2	3	4	(OT)	Final	Att.
25-31	31-28	31-34	25-19	(7-9)	119-121	12,666

Portland charged from a 10-point deficit after three quarters to tie the game with 47 seconds remaining, and held on as Maurice Cheeks missed a buzzer shot. . . Philadelphia led by five through much of the overtime period but it took a Blazer turnover and a last second free throw from Moses Malone to put the game away. . . The Blazers were 53 of 91 (.582) from the field but struggled at the foul line (13-24) and were outrebounded 44-32. . . Malone recorded 35 points and 14 rebounds, while Charles Barkley added 31 points and 13 retrieves. . . Vandeweghe's 30 points led Portland. . . It was the Sixers' eighth straight win. . . It was also the third straight year, and fourth time in five years, that the Sixers have won in Portland on New Year's Day. . . It was the Blazers' first setback in four overtime contests on the year.

SIXERS 153, BLAZERS 133, February 19, 1986, At Philadelphia (Game 58, 29-29)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
42-36	26-34	35-41	30-42	133-153	11,219

Moses Malone's season high 38 points led Philadelphia to a season high 153 points. . . Charles Barkley was all but unstoppable with 31 points and 17 rebounds. . . Bob McAdoo, who finished with a season high 20 points, hit three quick field goals early in the fourth quarter to ignite a Sixer surge that saw the lead stretch to as many as 26 at the 1:38 mark. . . Kiki Vandeweghe hit all nine of his first-half shots but got only seven shots in the second half and finished with 28 points. . . It was Portland's seventh straight setback and 10th loss in 11 outings. . . Julius Erving missed the game with a bruised heel.

BLAZERS vs. PHOENIX — Game-by-Game 1985-86

BLAZERS 128, SUNS 123 (OT), October 25, 1985, At Portland (Game 1, 1-0)

1	2	3	4	(OT)	Final	Att.
30-28	28-32	29-19	30-38	(11-6)	128-123	12,666

Kiki Vandeweghe and Jim Paxson each hit two jumpers from the 20-foot range early in overtime to bury the Suns on the opening night of the 1985-86 season. . . Though the two teams shared similar rebounding numbers (Portland had 23 offensive rebounds to Phoenix's 22, and each with a total of 54), the Blazers did more with what they got, scoring 33 points off the offensive boards to 16 by Phoenix. . . Sam Bowie's seven blocked shots would be his season high.

BLAZERS 110, SUNS 93, November 27, 1985, At Phoenix (Game 18, 11-7)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
25-26	21-21	38-23	26-23	110-93	9,884

Kiki Vandeweghe's 14 third-quarter points fueled a strong Blazer offensive show that stretched a one-point margin into 15. . . Portland outscored Phoenix 26-9 at the foul line in the second half.

BLAZERS 133, SUNS 104, January 3, 1986, At Portland (Game 37, 21-16)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
39-22	29-30	31-29	34-23	133-104	12,666

The 29-point final margin was the biggest Portland victory in the series history. . . The 133 points by the Blazers equalled their best mark ever against the Suns and their 56 field goals set a new series record. . . Portland hit 16 of 21 (.762) from the floor to break from the gate quickly in the opening quarter.

BLAZERS 112, SUNS 87, January 18, 1986, At Portland (Game 44, 26-18)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
32-32	33-18	27-19	20-18	112-87	12,666

After three straight road victories, Portland returned home to defeat Phoenix for the fifth consecutive time in the series, matching the Blazers' longest successful stretch over the Suns. . . The Blazers built a 65-50 lead and used a fierce halfcourt trap to limit the Suns to just 55 points in the final three quarters. . . Portland held Larry Nance, Phoenix's scorer with a 22.7 average, to just 15 points.

SUNS 136, BLAZERS 130, January 28, 1986, At Phoenix (Game 49, 28-21)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
36-29	28-35	26-38	40-34	130-136	9,931

Phoenix dominated the offensive boards and rebounded Portland 22-13 in the second half to defeat the Blazers for the first time in six meetings. . . The Blazers, down 14 in the fourth quarter, rallied to within one at the 2:35 mark before nine straight Suns' points settled the issue.

SUNS 113, BLAZERS 112, February 26, 1986, At Phoenix (Game 62, 29-33)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
28-31	26-32	36-26	22-24	112-113	10,323

Walter Davis' 20-foot jumper with eight seconds remaining put the winning touches on a rally which saw the Suns make up a 111-106 deficit in the last 2:20. . . Clyde Drexler's 14 third-quarter points helped the Blazers grab the lead during that period and hold it until the final Davis bucket.

BLAZERS vs. SACRAMENTO KINGS — Game-by-Game 1985-86

BLAZERS 126, KINGS 115, November 12, 1985, At Portland (Game 10, 8-2)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
22-24	28-31	40-22	36-38	126-115	12,666

The Portland front line made the difference as the Blazers pushed the ball inside to Sam Bowie and Kenny Carr in the second half. . . Bowie had one of the best games in his two-year career with 18 points, 11 rebounds, six assists, six blocks and only one turnover in 38 minutes.

BLAZERS 129, KINGS 125, January 25, 1986, At Sacramento (Game 47, 28-19)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
29-25	31-34	29-29	40-37	129-125	10,333

Jerome Kersey's eight points early in the fourth quarter helped Portland open up an 11-point lead that withstood a furious Sacramento comeback. . . The Blazers won the game at the free throw line, converting 19 of 21 attempts in the fourth quarter (41-46 for the game) compared to the Kings' 7 of 9 in the quarter (and 22-29 for the game). . . Sacramento outrebounded Portland 57-33. . . It was the Blazers' sixth win in seven games and fourth straight road conquest.

KINGS 121, BLAZERS 116, January 26, 1986, At Portland (Game 48, 28-20)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
30-28	25-21	29-33	32-39	116-121	12,666

Sacramento made 29 of 39 second-half shots, and 17 of 23 in the fourth quarter, to overcome a 10 point third-period deficit. . . Portland again owned the free throw line, converting 44 of 49 compared to the Kings' 25 of 29. . . Eddie Johnson led Sacramento with 38 points. . . It was Portland's first home loss to a team with a sub-.500 record.

BLAZERS 112, KINGS 102, March 23, 1986, At Portland (Game 73, 36-37)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
24-27	33-20	33-30	22-25	112-102	12,666

The Blazers, who fired at a .603 pace for three quarters, made just 10 of 27 shots from the floor and 2 of 7 from the foul line in the final period, but relied on rebounding dominance to keep Sacramento from making a late run. . . Mike Woodson hit 16 of 23 from the floor en route to posting 39 points for Sacramento, while Clyde Drexler's 32 points paced Portland.

KINGS 116, BLAZERS 99, March 25, 1986, At Sacramento (Game 74, 36-38)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
22-26	21-27	27-31	29-32	99-116	10,333

Eight Kings scored in double figures to stretch Portland's losing streak on the road to 12 (the last victory coming in Sacramento on Jan. 25). . . It improved Sacramento's home season record on Tuesday nights to 11-0. . . The Blazers shot .396 (21-53) from the floor in the second half. . . Reggie Theus led Sacramento with 18 points and 17 assists.

BLAZERS vs. WASHINGTON — Game-by-Game 1985-86

BULLETS 118, BLAZERS 115, December 3, 1985, At Washington (Game 21, 12-9)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.
30-37	19-25	33-29	33-27	115-118	4,685

Portland rallied from a 20-point second-quarter deficit, scored the first 10 points of the final period to go in front, 92-91, and battled to the wire before falling to clutch Washington shooting. . . Clyde Drexler hit 15 points in the fourth quarter to lead Portland. . . Kiki Vandeweghe, who finished with 30 points, suffered a stress fracture of the lower right fibula and missed the next three games. . . The Blazers, who had 11 turnovers in the first half, had just four after intermission and outscored the Bullets 12-5 off fast breaks in the second half. . . All five Portland starters scored in double figures. . . Jeff Ruland, who played all 48 minutes, fueled Washington with 26 points and 15 rebounds, while Jeff Malone hit his last six shots from the floor to finish with 28 points.

BULLETS 124, BLAZERS 116, February 11, 1986, At Portland (Game 54, 29-25)

1	2	3	4	Final	Att.

TAKE A BREAK WITH THE CHIEF.

Enjoy a hot and hearty sausage from one of the stands in the Coliseum. They feature Oregon Chief sausage, the same delicious product you can buy in your supermarket.

Oregon Chief makes all your favorite sausages, from pork links for your breakfast to pepperoni for your pizza. They're all made right here in Portland, using our own old-world recipes, from the freshest lean meat and zesty spices.

Look for the Chief the next time you're shopping– Oregon Chief sausages, hot dogs, lunch meats, bacon, and fresh pork products.

Made across town, not across the country.

The first radio show sold door-to-door.

John Williams is getting his show on the road, asking listeners to loan us their homes around 4:30 a.m. Of course, we'll need room for our full-service news team, sports specialists and satellite weather station — plus a good spot to land our Skyview Traffic helicopter.

Can we play at your house?

BLAZER SATELLITE RADIO

BILL SCHONELY

Known to many as "The Legend," Bill Schonely is truly one of the greats of sportscasting.

Schonely undoubtedly has the most recognized voice in Oregon. After 16 years behind the Blazer microphone, reaching the largest statewide network in the NBA, it's no wonder why. His "pictures" of the games are perhaps the most colorful in the business. "Rip City" is the battle cry of the Blazers and has become a term universally used by Blazer fans in their day-to-day conversations.

Originally, Schonely was the voice of the Western Hockey League's Seattle Totems and the NHL's Oakland Seals. He also described the action for the former Seattle Pilots, who became the Milwaukee Brewers of the American League. A veteran of the U.S. Marines, Schonely served as sports director of KVI radio in Seattle for seven years. He makes his off-season home in Hawaii.

GEOFF PETRIE

Geoff Petrie, the first-ever Portland Trail Blazer, enters his first season in the newly-created position of shooting instructor. He's in his second year as analyst on the team's radio broadcasts.

As shooting instructor, Petrie provides technical assistance to the Blazers on an individual basis. Being a member of Portland's broadcast crew, he observes the players every day, home and away, and has the opportunity to spot flaws and make adjustments with each player as needed on a daily basis.

Petrie doesn't just rely on standard video taping to get the job done, either. When it comes to shooting, he wrote the book, too. A graduate of Princeton, Petrie shared co-rookie-of-the-year honors with Dave Cowens of the Boston Celtics after being Portland's first draft selection prior to its inaugural season of 1970-71. He still owns the top spot on the Blazers' all-time scoring list with 9732 points in six seasons. In addition, the 6-4 guard set club records for assists and minutes played that remain the standards today.

A year ago, in his first season behind the Blazer microphone, Petrie displayed a strong ability to provide insight into the action on the floor in a way that appealed to fans of all degree. He augmented the play-by-play of another Blazer original Bill Schonely. The two have grown up together in the Portland organization and possess a chemistry much sought but rarely obtained in the industry.

BLAZER MAILBAG WITH STEVE JONES

Steve Jones' weekly column, Blazer Mailbag, is featured in several publications throughout Oregon and southwest Washington. Beginning in the 1983-84 season, Blazer Mailbag became a regular feature in This Week magazine, which is delivered free to more than 600,000 homes every week in the tri-county area. Blazer Mailbag addresses issues pertaining to the Trail Blazers, the entire NBA and the sport of basketball in general. Fans who submit questions and have them used in this column receive two free tickets to a future Blazer game. Questions should be sent to Blazer Mailbag care of the Trail Blazers. Long time publishers of the weekly feature include This Week magazine; Vancouver Columbian; Ontario Argus-Observer; Newport News; and the Albany Democrat-Herald.

BLAZER TELEVISION NETWORK

Flagship station KOIN-TV, Channel 6, will again air 20 Blazer road games this season. The Blazer Television Network reaches nearly every television set in Oregon from KOIN in Portland to McCaw Cable in southern Oregon to Group W Cable in Eugene.

STEVE JONES

A Portland native, Steve Jones comes from Franklin High School and the University of Oregon. He was an all-star guard in the now-defunct ABA, then retired with the Trail Blazers in 1976 after the two leagues merged.

Now, Jones has become a veteran of the broadcast business. He is entering his fourth year as the analyst for all Blazer telecasts. But he didn't come without first earning an impressive resume.

In 1976 (the season after he retired), Jones became a color commentator for CBS. He was part of the CBS announce team that handled the Trail Blazers famed Championship game. Also that year, he was the color analyst for the Blazers. Steve continued for three seasons with CBS, and the Denver Nuggets.

Finally, in 1979, Jones came home to Portland to join Bill Schonely on the Blazer radio microphone. During his tenure with the Blazers, Steve has additionally been with the USA Cable Network as a commentator for NBA games.

That year, he stepped aside on radio to devote a full-time effort to a new radio talk show, Blazer Sports Talk. The show has become the most popular sports talk show in Oregon. It now is aired not only prior to every Blazer game, but also on Monday nights throughout the year.

Jones also has a syndicated column, Blazer Mailbag, which is syndicated throughout the state of Oregon.

PAT LAFFERTY

Pat Lafferty, a 15-year veteran television and radio sportscaster in the state of Oregon, is in his first year as the play-of-play announcer for the Trail Blazers, working alongside analyst Steve Jones.

A native of Portland and 1967 graduate of the University of Oregon, Lafferty has been the Blazers' public address announcer at Memorial Coliseum the past three seasons and will continue in that capacity when he's not in front of the television camera. He also serves the Portland front office in the capacity of sales account executive.

Lafferty has served as assistant station manager and sports director at KLOO Radio in Corvallis, where he also was the station's top advertising account representative the past 15 years. He worked four years as a member of the Oregon State basketball television announcing crew and hosted Beaver Coach Ralph Miller's weekly program the past five seasons. He'd also been the voice of Oregon State baseball and Corvallis High School football and basketball for 15 years.

Prior to entering the broadcast field in Corvallis, the 40-year-old Lafferty served as an army information officer in Vietnam from 1968-70. He and his wife, Isae, are the parents of 12-year-old twin sons, Dan and Sean.

BLAZER SPORTS TALK

Blazer Sports Talk, hosted by Steve Jones, airs on KGW 90 minutes prior to every game. Blazer Sports Talk Special Edition will air 50 weeks a year on Monday nights, from 6-8 p.m.
